

OVO ENERGY WOMEN'S TOUR FACTFILE

OVERALL WINNERS

- Five riders have won the six editions of the OVO Energy Women's Tour since its inaugural 2014 race.
- Lizzie Deignan (2016 and 2019) is the sole rider to have won the race twice to date. She is also the only British victor of the event - Hannah Barnes (second, 2017) and Dani Rowe (third, 2018) are the only other home riders to finish on the podium.
- Coryn Rivera became the first non-European rider to win the race overall when she triumphed in the 2018 edition.
- Kasia Niewiadoma (2017) is the only rider to lead an edition of the race from start to finish.
- The 2019 edition had five different race leaders (Jolien D'hoore, Marianne Vos, Lisa Brennauer, Liane Lippert and Lizzie Deignan) - more than any edition to date.
- The 2014, 2015 and 2016 editions all had three different riders lead the race: Emma Johansson, Rossella Ratto and Marianne Vos in 2014; Lizzie Deignan, Christine Majerus and Lisa Brennauer in 2015; Majerus, Vos and Deignan in 2016.
- The 2019 edition was the closest to date, with only two seconds separating winner Lizzie Deignan and runner-up Kasia Niewiadoma. This beat the 2015 edition, in which six seconds separated winner Lisa Brennauer and runner-up Jolien d'Hoore, and just 30 seconds separated the top 10.
- Kasia Niewiadoma won the 2017 edition by the biggest margin to date: one minute and 18 seconds.
- Lizzie Deignan (2019) is the oldest winner of the race at 30 years, five months and 28 days. Kasia Niewiadoma is the youngest (22 years, eight months and 13 days) – the only rider in race history to win it aged 25 or younger.

STAGE WINNERS

- Marianne Vos and Jolien D'hoore have won the most stages of the race to date: five. They are also the only riders to win multiple stages in a single year (Vos won three in 2014, D'hoore won two in 2019).
- Five different riders won stages in each of the 2015, 2016, 2017 and 2018 editions of the race (when it comprised five days). Five different riders also won stages in the 2019 race, the first to be held over six days.
- Seven riders have won stages in more than one edition of the race: Marianne Vos (2014, 2016 and 2019); Lizzie Deignan (2015, 2016 and 2019); Jolien D'hoore (2015, 2017, 2018 and 2019); Christine Majerus (2015 and 2016); Amy Pieters (2016, 2017 and 2019); Lotta Lepisto (2016 and 2018); Sarah Roy (2017 and 2018); and Kasia Niewiadoma (2017 and 2019).
- 15 different riders have won stages of the Women's Tour – the most recent addition to the list being Amalie Dideriksen in Worcester in 2018 (stage four).
- 12 different nationalities have won stages of the Women's Tour. Dutch riders have won the most (eight), with Belgium on five and Great Britain on four.
- Sarah Roy (AUS - stage four, 2017 & stage three, 2018), Chloe Hosking (AUS – stage three, 2017) and Coryn Rivera (USA – stage two, 2018) are the only non-European stage winners in race history to date.

- The largest winning margin in a stage was 1:42, achieved by Kasia Niewiadoma over a 17-rider chase group during stage one of the 2017 race between Daventry and Kettering.
- Rossella Ratto is the youngest Women's Tour stage winner; she was 20 years, six months and 18 days when she won stage two in Bedford in 2014.
- Sarah Roy is the oldest Women's Tour stage winner; she was 32 years, three months and 19 days when she won stage three in Royal Leamington Spa in 2018.
- Italian rider Giorgia Bronzini finished in the top 10 in 16 OVO Energy Women's Tour stages between 2014 and 2018 but never claimed a victory. Her best result was second in Welwyn Garden City and Bury St Edmunds (2014); and Royal Leamington Spa and Colwyn Bay (2018).

THE JERSEYS

- Lizzie Deignan became the first rider to win three jerseys in a single edition of the race in 2019: she won the OVO Energy green jersey, Breast Cancer Care points jersey and HSBC UK | British Cycling Best British Rider jersey.
- Four riders - Marianne Vos, Lisa Brennauer Lizzie Deignan and Coryn Rivera – have previously won two jerseys in a single edition of the race. Vos (2014) and Brennauer (2015) won the green and points jerseys; Deignan (2016) the green and Best British Rider jerseys; Rivera (2018) the green and sprints jerseys.
- Marianne Vos has won the points classification three times - 2014, 2016 and 2018.
- Lizzie Deignan and Hannah Barnes are the only riders to win the HSBC UK | British Cycling Best British Rider Jersey twice in race history – 2016 and 2019 for Deignan, 2015 and 2017 for Barnes.
- The SKODA Queen of the Mountains jersey has been won by six different riders in the six editions of the race to date.

HOST TOWNS AND CITIES

- Northamptonshire has hosted the OVO Energy Women's Tour more times than any other county: five (yearly between 2014 and 2018). It notably hosted the race's first-ever stage between Oundle and Northampton in 2014, as well as the Grand Depart in 2017.
- Warwickshire has welcomed the race for the past four editions (2016-2019), and notably hosted the event's first hill-top finish this year - held at Burton Dassett Country Park.
- Suffolk hosted the 2019 Grand Depart with a stage between Beccles and Stowmarket. It previously hosted the opening stage in 2015 (Bury St Edmunds to Aldeburgh) and 2018 (Framlingham to Southwold), as well as co-hosting the 2016 race start (Southwold to Norwich) with neighbouring Norfolk.
- Atherstone (Warwickshire) and Kettering (Northamptonshire) have both hosted three stages of the race, more than any other town or city in race history. All of Atherstone's appearances (2016, 2017 & 2018) were as stage starts, while Kettering has only hosted stage finishes in 2015 (stage three), 2016 (stage five) and 2017 (stage one).
- Wales hosted its first stage when stage five of the 2018 edition took place between Dolgellau and Colwyn Bay. The country then welcomed the final two days of the 2019 race, which took place in Powys and Carmarthenshire.
- Royal Leamington Spa hosted a stage finish in both the 2018 Women's Tour (stage three) and Tour of Britain (stage four).
- 125,000 fans watched the race's finale in London in 2017 – the race used the same 6.2km circuit around Regent Street St James, Piccadilly, Strand and Whitehall that featured in the 2015, 2016 and 2018 Tour of Britain.

PARTICIPATIONS

- Six riders have started all six editions of the Women's Tour to date: 2015 champion Lisa Brennauer; podium finishers Hannah Barnes and Elisa Longo Borghini; Gracie Elvin, Leah Kirchmann and Anouska Koster.
- Of those six, only Barnes, Longo Borghini and Kirchmann have finished all six editions.
- 2018 champion Coryn Rivera won the race on only her second appearance in the race. She abandoned her other participation – in 2015 – after stage two.
