

INTRODUCTION

OVERALL WINNERS

- Five riders have won the six editions of the OVO Energy Women's Tour since its inaugural 2014 race.
- Lizzie Deignan (GBR) is the sole double champion in race history to date: she won the 2016 and 2019 editions.
- Coryn Rivera (USA) became the first non-European rider to win the race overall when she triumphed in the 2018 edition.
- Kasia Niewiadoma (POL, 2017) is the only rider to lead an edition of the race from start to finish.
- The 2019 edition was the closest to date, with only two seconds separating winner Lizzie Deignan and runner-up Kasia Niewiadoma.
- Kasia Niewiadoma won the 2017 edition by the biggest margin to date: one minute and 18 seconds.
- Lizzie Deignan (2019) is the oldest winner of the race at 30 years, five months and 28 days.
- Kasia Niewiadoma is the youngest (22 years, eight months and 13 days) the only rider in race history to win it aged 25 or younger.

STAGE WINNERS

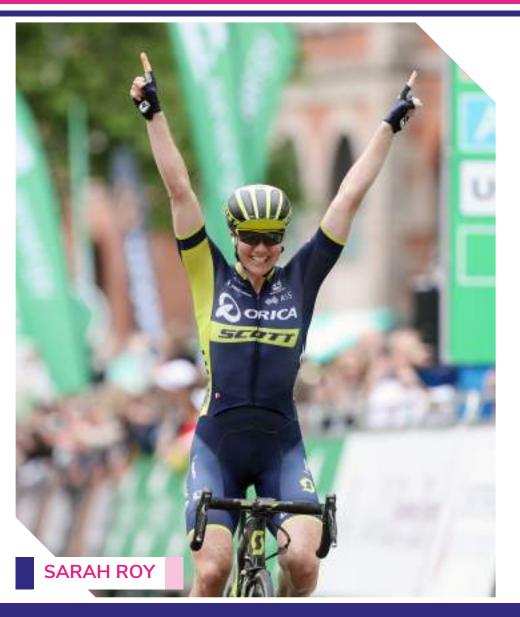

- Marianne Vos (NED) and Jolien D'hoore (BEL) have won the most stages of the race to date: five.
- Vos (three in 2014) and D'hoore (two in 2019) are the only riders to win multiple stages of the race in the same year.
- Eight riders have won stages in more than one edition of the race: Vos (2014, 2016 and 2019); D'hoore (2015, 2017 and 2018); Lizzie Deignan (GBR, 2015, 2016 and 2019); Christine Majerus (LUX, 2015 and 2016); Amy Pieters (NED, 2016, 2017 and 2019); Lotta Henttala (2016 and 2018); Sarah Roy (AUS, 2017 and 2018) and Kasia Niewiadoma (POL, 2017 and 2019).
- Five different riders won stages in each of the 2015, 2016, 2017 and 2018 editions of the race.
- Fifteen different riders have won stages of the Women's Tour the most recent addition to the list being Amalie Dideriksen (NED) in Worcester in 2018 (stage four).
- Twelve different nationalities have won stages of the Women's Tour. Dutch riders have won the most (eight), three ahead of Belgium.
- Sarah Roy (AUS, stage four 2017 and stage three 2018), Chloe Hosking (AUS, stage three, 2017) and Coryn Rivera (USA, stage two 2018) are the only non-European stage winners in race history to date.

STAGE WINNERS

- The largest winning margin in a stage was 1'42", achieved by Kasia Niewiadoma (POL) over a 17-rider chase group during stage one of the 2017 race between Daventry and Kettering.
- Lizzie Deignan (GBR) holds the record for the longest time between victories: 17 stages went by between her winning in Chesterfield on day three in 2016 and the Royal Welsh Showground, Builth Wells, on the penultimate day of the 2019 race.
- Rossella Ratto (ITA) is the youngest Women's Tour stage winner; she was 20 years, six months and 18 days when she won stage two in Bedford in 2014.
- Sarah Roy (AUS) is the oldest Women's Tour stage winner; she was 32 years, three months and 19 days when she won stage three in Royal Leamington Spa in 2018.
- Italian rider Giorgia Bronzini finished in the top 10 on 16 Women's Tour stages between 2014 and 2018 but never claimed a victory. Her best result was second in Welwyn Garden City and Bury St Edmunds (2014); and Royal Leamington Spa and Colwyn Bay (2018).

THE JERSEYS

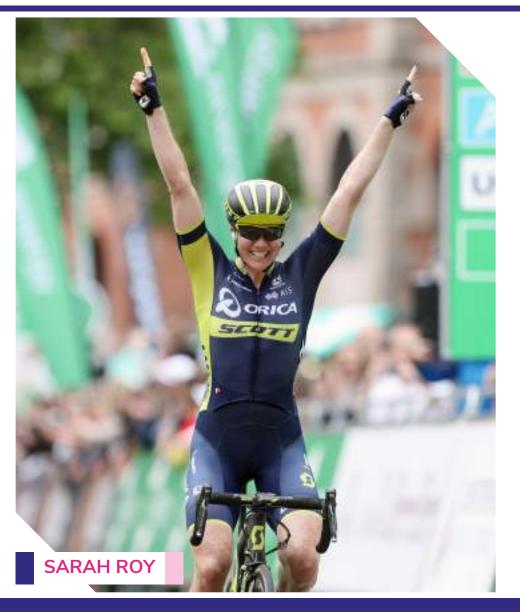

- 2019 saw four different riders wear the leader's jersey across the six days the most in any edition of the modern race: Jolien D'hoore (BEL), Marianne Vos (NED), Lisa Brennauer (GER), Liane Lippert (GER) and Lizzie Deignan (GBR).
- The 2014, 2015 and 2016 editions all had three different riders lead the race.
- In 2017 only one rider led the race: Kasia Niewiadoma (POL) topped the standings from start to finish.
- British riders have spent the most days in the leader's jersey of any nationality: six days, all courtesy of Lizzie Deignan. Dutch, American, Polish and German riders all have five days combined as race leader.
- Nine different nationalities of rider have worn the race leader's jersey since the inaugural edition of the Women's Tour in 2014.
- British and Dutch riders have worn the race leader's jersey in three editions of the race to date more than any other nation (Luxembourg, Belgian and German riders have led in two editions each).

THE JERSEYS

- Lizzie Deignan (GBR) is the only rider to win three jerseys in one edition of the race: in 2019 she claimed the leaders', points and Best British rider jersey.
- Kasia Niewiadoma (POL, leader's and Queen of the Mountains), Marianne Vos
 (NED, leader's and points), Lisa Brennauer (GER, leader's and points) Coryn Rivera (USA, leader's and sprints) and Christine Majerus (LUX, Queen of the Mountains and sprints) have all won two jersey classifications in race history.
- Rivera is the only rider in race history to successfully defend a jersey: she won the sprints jersey in 2018 and 2019.
- Three of the race's overall winners (Deignan in 2019, Brennauer in 2015 and Vos in 2014) won the points jersey in the same year.
- The SKODA Queen of the Mountains jersey has been won by six different riders in the six editions of the race to date.
- The now-defunct Wiggle HIGH5 team won the Queen of the Mountains jersey in back-to-back years (2017 and 2018) with two different riders: Audrey Cordon Ragot (FRA) and Elisa Longo Borghini (ITA) respectively.

IN NUMBERS: DISTANCES

- Since 2014 the Women's Tour has covered 3,812.2 kilometres of racing on British roads.
- Although the addition of a sixth day for the 2019 race made it the longest yet in terms of distance (790 kilometres), the 2018 Tour has the greatest average daily stage length (135.6km) of any edition.
- All four held stages in Warwickshire to date rank among the longest 10 in race history. Stage four of the 2019 Tour between Warwick and Burton Dassett Country Park is the longest stage held to date (158.9km).
- The 2017 finale in London is the shortest Women's Tour stage to date, measuring just 62km.
- Three of the five stages in the inaugural 2014 edition were below 100 kilometres. Only two of the 26 stages since measured under the 100-kilometre mark.
- Marianne Vos (NED) has won five stages of the race to date; four of which came at the end of stages ranked in the top-10 shortest in Tour history. Her victory in Stoke-on-Trent on day four of the 2016 Tour is the sole exemption to this.

^{*} UCI rules in 2014 restricted stage races to comprise maximum average of 100 kilometres per day.

IN NUMBERS: BRITS AT THE TOUR

- Lizzie Deignan is the only British rider to either lead the Women's Tour or win it.
- Deignan and Hannah Barnes are the sole British stage victors to date; Deignan has won three stages, Barnes one.
- The 2015 race when Deignan won stage one in Aldebrugh and Barnes triumphed in Hemel Hempstead on the final day is the only edition of the Women's Tour with two British stage victors.
- Seven other British riders have placed in the top 10 of Women's Tour stages without winning one: Lucy van der Haar (née Garner) posted six finishes between second and 10th between 2014 and 2016.
- At least one British rider has placed in the race's final top 10 in all six editions of the race to date. 2017 saw three riders (Hannah Barnes, third; Alice Barnes, sixth; Dani Rowe, ninth) in the top 10 the most of any edition.
- British riders failed to win stages in three of the six editions of the Tour: 2014, 2017 and 2018.

IN NUMBERS: PARTICIPATIONS

- Six riders have started all six editions of the Women's Tour to date: 2015 champion Lisa Brennauer (GER); podium finishers Hannah Barnes (GBR) and Elisa Longo Borghini (ITA); Gracie Elvin (AUS), Leah Kirchmann (USA) and Anouska Koster (NED).
- Of those six, only Barnes, Longo Borghini and Kirchmann have finished all six editions.
- Prior to retiring at the end of 2018, Dani Rowe (GBR) and Giorgia Broznini (ITA) had both started and finished the first five editions of the race.
- 2018 champion Coryn Rivera (USA) won the race on only her second appearance in the race. She abandoned her other participation in 2015 after stage two.
- Kasia Niewiadoma (POL) has only competed in three editions of the race: she won on her debut in 2017, finished 20th in 2018 and then placed second overall in 2019.

SHARON LAWS 1974-2017

We remember Sharon Laws, Queen of the Mountains in the inaugural edition of the Women's Tour in 2014.

The 2012 British road race champion, she rode and finished the first two editions of the race, winning the Queen of the Mountains jersey in 2014 and finishing third in the classification in the following year.

Sharon raced aggressively throughout both editions, while also charming everyone involved in the event with her personality and willingness to promote the race and women's sport.

In 2017 Sharon returned to the event to join the ITV4 commentary team, again proving to be a star thanks to her insights and warm, engaging tone.

She passed away on 16 December 2017, aged just 43, 14 months after announcing her cervical cancer diagnosis.
