Our planet depends on clean water

Water is the lifeblood of our planet. It is essential in supporting human life, nourishing indispensable habitats and supplying agriculture and industry. In order to accomplish these crucial tasks, water must be kept clean. The amount and availability of clean water has become one of the greatest challenges of our time. World Rowing believes that we all have a responsibility to apply environmentally-sustainable practices to our use and management of water.

Rowing is a clean water sport and everyone involved in rowing has reason to protect this vital resource.

In 2011 World Rowing and WWF, the World Wide Fund for Nature, formed a global clean water partnership. This engages all rowers, rowing clubs and national rowing federations to work towards safeguarding their freshwater environments.

A joint action project, the Kafue River & Rowing Centre is a manifestation of this partnership. This project was inspired by the confluence of many pressures and problems in the Kafue River in Zambia and the need to bring all stakeholders together to discuss and help find solutions.

The development of a multi-purpose facility for water management education and research and the advancement of rowing in the region is underway. The global rowing community is at the forefront of a fundraising campaign to help establish the centre.

Donations are welcome

2.2 Boat classes & scoring

The World Rowing Cup, in its current form, was established by FISA in 1997 to give athletes more opportunities for top international racing. It is a series of three regattas that acts as a lead-up to the World Rowing Championships. The racing programme in Poznan includes the 14 Olympic boat classes, six para-rowing boat classes and three international boat classes.

Olympic and World Rowing Cup boat classes

Men

Single Sculls (M1x)	Single Sculls (W1x)
Double Sculls (M2x)	Double Sculls (W2x)
Lightweight Double Sculls (LM2x)	Lightweight Double Sculls (LW2x)
Quadruple Sculls (M4x)	Quadruple Sculls (W4x)
Pair (M2-)	Pair (W2-)
Four (M4-)	Four (W4-)
Eight (M8+)	Eight (W8+)

Women

International boat classes

Men

Lightweight Single Sculls (LM1x)	Lightweight Single Sculls (LW1x)
Lightweight Quadruple Sculls (LM4x)

Women

Para-rowing boat classes

Para men's single sculls (PR1 M1x & PR2 M1x)
Para women's single sculls (PR1 W1x)
Para mixed double sculls (PR2 Mix2x)
Para mixed coxed four (PR3 Mix4+)
Para men's pair (PR3 M2-)

Each Olympic boat class earns points based on the finishing order. The highest placing boat from a country is awarded the following points:

1st	8 points
2nd	6 points
3rd	5 points
4th	4 points
5th	3 points
6th	2 points
7th	1 point

If a country has more than one crew in a boat class, points will be awarded only to the first crew. The crew with the most points in each boat class is declared the World Rowing Cup leader and receives the yellow 'World Rowing Cup Leader Bib.' After the third World Rowing Cup regatta, the crew with the most points in each boat class is declared the World Cup winner and receives the World Rowing Cup for that boat class.

At the end of each World Cup, the country with the most points will be declared winner of that World Rowing Cup regatta and will receive the leading nation cup. The nation with the most points overall from all boat classes is declared overall winner of the 2019 World Rowing Cup.

3 Who to watch

3.1 Who to watch

Women's pair (W2-)

It is the first appearance this season for the crews from New Zealand, Australia and Canada and with it, many of the big names are back in play.

Canada has made a change to their World Champion line-up of Hillary Janssens and Caileigh Filmer. Janssens will be rowing with a new partner, Sydney Payne. Payne raced in the silver medal Canadian eight at last year's World Rowing Championships in Plovdiv. They will face a big challenge from World silver medallists of Grace Prendergast and Kerri Gowler. The New Zealand duo has the advantage of years rowing together.

The gold and silver medallists from the European Championships, Spain and Romania have not entered crews, but bronze medallists Italy will certainly challenge for the podium. Watch out too for the United States. They entered two women's pairs, including Olympians Tracy Eisser and Megan Kalmoe.

Men's pair (M2-)

Are the Sinkovic brothers the new Kiwi pair? They have become the crew to beat and may be working towards the undefeated record that Murray and Bond boasted. Martin and Valent Sinkovic will race in Poznan and if they manage to hold on to the form seen at the 2019 European Rowing Championships in Lucerne, they will be hard to beat.

The rest of the field is full of talent and with an aura of mystery as there are many new line-ups. Australia has entered top talent Alexander Hill and Joshua Booth. Hill is the reigning World Champion in the men's four and Booth comes out of the silver medal winning men's eight. Italy has a new line-up, including World Champion Giuseppe Vicino and young partner Leonardo Pietra Caprina. New Zealand has entered their 2018 line-up of Michael Brake and Thomas Murray who were fifth last year.

And don't forget about France and the Czech Republic. The French brothers Theophile and Valentin Onfroy are 2018 world bronze medallists and 2018 European silver medallists, but found themselves out of the final at this year's European Championships. The Czech combination of Jakub Podrazil and Lukas Helesic have had mixed results, however if it goes their way, they might just fight for the podium.

Women's double sculls (W2x)

There is an impressive 22 entries in the women's double sculls and the field is full of speed. The reigning World Champions are Lithuania's crew of Milda Valciukaite and Ieva Adomaviciute. But the duo struggled three weeks ago at the European Championships in Lucerne and finished in fifth. It was Leonie Menzel and Carlotta Nwajide from Germany who won gold in Lucerne. Menzel and Nwajide have entered in Poznan and are likely to be medal contenders.

Bronze medallists from the European Rowing Championships, Italy has also entered the same line-up for Poznan. They are definitely a crew to watch. And then there is the addition of the non-European crews. The United States has entered two power-house doubles. Olympic silver medallist in the women's single, Genevra Stone has teamed up with Cicely Madden. Also entered from the US are 2018 World bronze medallists, Ellen Tomek and Meghan O'Leary. Both crews are likely to be strong.

Watch out too for New Zealand's Brooke Donaghue and Olivia Loe. They are silver medallists from the 2018 World Rowing Championships and have a handful of medals around their neck. And don't be surprised to see China in the final. They won the first World Rowing Cup of the season.

Men's double sculls (M2x)

The French are the reigning World Champions in this boat class. But Hugo Bucheron and Matthieu Androdias had a rough go at the European Championships in Lucerne, finishing in sixth place. Poland took the title in Lucerne and they have made one change to their line-up: Mateusz Biskup has replaced Fabian Baranski. Poland has not been able to settle on a line-up this season and seem to be testing combinations across all their crews.

The Swiss are likely to be medal contenders. After finishing with a silver medal at last year's World Rowing Championships, they showed their early season speed with a repeat performance at the European Championships a few weeks ago.

Watch out too for the return of Kiwi double of John Storey and Christopher Harris. They are bronze medallists from last year's World Championships and this is their first race for the 2019 season. There might be a challenge as well from the Chinese combination of Zhiyu Liu and Liang Zhang. They finished on top of the podium at the first World Rowing Cup this season.

Women's Four (W4-)

There are 15 crews entered as the season charges towards the Olympic qualification regatta later this season. The 2020 Olympics is the first time that the women's four has been in the Olympics and the boat class has become much more competitive. The Dutch won the first two events of the season, showing their strength in the category, but they have entered an under-23 crew in Poznan.

That leaves the door open for the Americans to test their new line-ups. The US are the reigning World Champions, but have been unable to settle on a combination so far this season. Their top boat entered contains two out of last year's winning crew and they are joined by Olympic Champions Emily Regan and Victoria Opitz.

Australia has also entered an all-star crew. They have three of their four silver medallists from last year's World Rowing Championships and they are joined by Olympian Olympia Aldersey. Watch out too for strong crews from Poland and Denmark as well as a new combination from Canada.

Men's four (M4-)

Australia won at the 2018 World Championships, but this year they have made quite a switch. They put two of their biggest names into the men's pair and left only one of last year's crew remaining in the four, Jack Hargreaves. It will be interesting to see what this new line-up can do.

Great Britain could be ones to watch after their gold medal win at the European Championships. They seem to have found a new combination that is gelling well together.

Italy has entered yet another new-look for this second World Rowing Cup after finishing fifth at the European Championships. They haven't been able to find their silver medal winning speed from the 2018 World Rowing Championships.

Expect challenges from Poland and Germany as well. They have both been on the podium so far this year and are regularly top-finishers in this boat class.

Women's single sculls (W1x)

In the absence of World Champion Sanita Puspure of Ireland and World silver medallist Jeannine Gmelin of Switzerland, the top of the podium is for the taking in Poznan. The one to beat is likely to be Austria's Magdalena Lobnig. Lobnig finished fourth at the European Championships and has a bronze medal from last year's World Rowing Championships.

Lobnig is likely to face competition from a handful of top athletes. Denmark's Fie Udby Erichsen has been climbing in the ranks over the last few years, she finished just behind Lobnig at the European Championships. China's Jiang Yan picked up a silver medal at the first World Rowing Cup and is also entered in Poznan.

Canada's Carling Zeeman has seen a handful of top results in the last few years and might challenge for a top spot. The United States has entered Kara Kohler. Kohler beat Olympic silver medallist Geneva Stone a few weeks ago in the US trials to secure her spot as the American single sculler. Watch out too for rowing legend Ekaterina Karsten of Belarus as well as the return to rowing of New Zealand's Emma Twigg.

Men's single sculls (M1x)

With 36 entries in the men's single sculls, athletes will face a heavy schedule of racing, including quarterfinals, over the three-day World Cup regatta. It will be a test of experience against youth. Germany's new star Oliver Zeidler recently won the European Rowing Championships and looks to be on a roll. Pushing him to the line will likely be Robert Manson of New Zealand. Manson secured the New Zealand single sculls spot over three-time Olympian Mahe Drysdale earlier this season.

Both Manson and Zeidler will have to contend with the reigning World Champion, Kjetil Borch of Norway. Borch struggled with injury in the lead-up to the European Championships where he found himself out of the final. But if he's on form, he will be fast.

Cuba's Angel Fournier Rodriguez is entered for the first time this season. Fournier has only competed in a handful of events since the 2016 Olympics, but carries a bucket of medals to his name and is likely to be a contender in Poznan. Watch out too for Belarus' Pilip Pavukou and Denmark's Sverri Nielsen. They have both posted top results already this season and they might have a shot at the podium.

Lightweight women's double sculls (LW2x)

The one, two, three from the European Rowing Championships will take to the water in Poznan and are joined by 18 more crews. Belarus' combination of Alena Furman and Anastasiia Ianina took the category by surprise when they convincingly won the European Championships. But they will have tougher competition this time. The Chinese duo of Dandan Pan and Wenzhi Huang won the first World Rowing Cup and look to be in fine form this season.

Furman and Ianina will also have a challenge from the top French crew of Claire Bove and Laura Tarantola. This duo finished second at the European Championships. And watch out for the Swiss combination of Frederique Rol and Patricia Merz. Rol and Merz have been climbing in the standings over the last year and rowed their way to bronze at the European Championships.

Keep an eye too on the new American crew of Christine Cavallo and Michelle Sechser. And the Kiwi duo of Jackie Kiddle and Zoe McBride is back. If they have found their rhythm, they might just be on the podium.

Lightweight men's double sculls (LM2x)

Twenty-five crews have entered making it a sight to see. The new German combination of Jason Osborne and Jonathan Rommelmann will attempt to repeat their gold medal winning performance from the European Rowing Championships. They may, however, have an uphill battle. Osborne and Rommelmann will have European silver medallists from Italy, Pietro Ruta and Stefano Oppo hot on their tails.

France's Olympic Champion Pierre Houin has teamed up with the young Hugo Beurey. This combination will be looking to find their speed before Olympic qualification later this year. Watch out too for Poland. They finished second at the first World Rowing Cup, but were pushed out of the final at the European Championships. Keep an eye on the new combination from the United States. Andrew Campbell Jr. boasted big results in the lightweight single and has teamed up with Nicholas Trojan.

Women's quadruple sculls (W4x)

The Germans found their way to the top of the podium at the European Rowing Championships in Lucerne and have entered the same line-up. But they have not yet gone up against the Chinese.

The Chinese combination beat the Dutch at the first World Rowing Cup of the season and look to be on form this season. The 2018 World Champions from Poland found themselves in fourth at the European Championships and will certainly be looking to be back on the podium in Poznan.

The Netherlands and Australia complete the field. The Australians finished seventh at last year's World Rowing Championships, but have made a few line-up changes and the Dutch have entered their under-23 crew for extra race experience.

Men's quadruple sculls (M4x)

The Dutch pulled a trick out of their hat with a convincing win in the men's quadruple sculls a few weeks ago at the European Rowing Championships. The Dutch, however, have not entered in Poznan. This leaves the impressive Italian crew to fight for the top of the podium.

Italy is the reigning World Champions and are probably the crew to beat. They will face a big challenge from 2018 world silver medallists from Australia. The Australian line-up has one change, with Cameron Girdlestone replacing Campbell Watts.

Watch out too for Great Britain. Their new combination finished third at the European Championships in Lucerne and they are likely to put forward a strong performance in Poznan. And don't forget about Germany. They have a stacked line-up which finished just behind Great Britain in Lucerne.

Women's eight (W8+)

This is the biggest field so far this season in the women's eight and almost all of the top contenders have entered. The United States is putting in their new line-up. They have changed a few new names since last year's win at the World Rowing Championships.

The US will face a tough challenge from 2018 World silver medallists, Canada. The Canadian crew has several new members, but still are likely to have similar speed to last year's combination. Watch out too for Australia. They finished third at the 2018 World Championships.

In the absence of the Romanians, Great Britain might also be a top contender for a medal. They finished second at the European Championships a few weeks ago.

Men's eight (M8+)

The question in the men's eight is: can anyone beat the Germans? They raced to yet another gold at the European Rowing Championships, despite a valiant effort from the British. Poznan will be another chance for the British to take on the unbeatable Germans.

This time there is a new all-black boat in the field. The New Zealand eight has entered a crew reinforced by two rowing legends, Mahe Drysdale and Hamish Bond. Olympic Champion Bond has been tasked with using his undefeated rhythm to stroke the boat to victory and Drysdale's incredible strength has been added to power the engine. Potentially, this new Kiwi combination stands a chance at gold. The men's eight will definitely be one to watch.

Lightweight women's single sculls (LW1x)

The lightweight women's single sculls has an impressive 16 entries. Many of last year's top competitors have slotted into the double sculls, but keep an eye on Jill Moffatt of Canada. She finished 5th at last year's World Rowing Championships. Also watch out for Sweden's Emma Fredh and South Africa's Ursula Grobler.

Lightweight men's single sculls (LM1x)

The favourite in the lightweight men's single sculls might be the recently crowned European Champion Peter Galambos of Hungary. He will face a challenge from Poland's Artur Mikolajczewski and Italy's Martino Goretti.

Lightweight men's quadruple sculls (LM4x)

The lightweight men's quadruple sculls has five entries and the crew to beat is Italy. They are reigning World and European Champions. They will have to contend with the fast Austrian crew and a new line-up from China.

Para PR1 men's single sculls (PR1 M1x)

There is a full spectrum of para-rowing entries for this World Rowing Cup. In the PR1 para men's single sculls the race is on between Australia's Erik Horrie and Ukraine's Roman Polianskyi. Polianskyi had the upper hand earlier this season when he won at the FISA International Para-Rowing Regatta, but Horrie will certainly be looking to get back on top of the podium.

Para PR1 women's single sculls (PR1 W1x)

The PR1 para women's single sculls sees the return of World Champion Birgit Skarstein of Norway. Skarstein has been dominating this boat class for the last two years and is likely to be on top of the podium in Poznan. Watch out too for Hallie Smith from the United States. She finished in the bronze medal position at last year's World Rowing Championships and also entered is Germany's Sylvia Pille-Steppat who finished fourth last year.

Para PR2 mixed double sculls (PR2 Mix2x)

In the PR2 para mixed double sculls there is no doubt about the leading duo. Corne de Koning and Annika van der Meer of the Netherlands are reigning World Champions and have gone undefeated over the last two years. They will be challenged by World silver medallists Jolanta Majka and Michal Gadowski from Poland. And watch out too for the new crew from France. Perle Bouge holds the title in the PR2 women's single sculls and has teamed up with a new partner, Christophe Lavigne.

Para PR3 mixed coxed four (PR3 Mix4+)

Eight crews have entered the PR3 mixed coxed four, including the reigning World Champions from Great Britain. They will be challenged by the United States and France who finished in silver and bronze medal positions respectively at last year's World Championships.

International Para-rowing boat classes

There are two international para-rowing boat classes being contested in Poznan; the PR2 para men's single sculls and the PR3 para men's pair. Corne de Koning of the Netherlands is likely the one to beat in the PR2 para men's single sculls, he is the reigning World Champion. And watch out for the new British combination in the PR3 para men's pair. Paralympic Champion James Fox has made a return and teamed up with World Champion Oliver Stanhope.

4 Current season highlights

4.1 Current season summary

The 2019 season is charging forward with the first two events of the year off to a smashing start. The first World Rowing Cup opened the Olympic qualification year in Plovdiv, Bulgaria. European crews then got to race at the European Rowing Championships in Lucerne, Switzerland.

The first World Rowing Cup had China on top of the leaderboard. They entered every boat class possible and secured 61 points to come first. Poland finished in second with 45 points and the Netherlands came third. But the event was early in the season and many of the top crews had not entered.

Then came the European Rowing Championships. This saw an impressive entry of nearly 600 competitors from 36 nations. Germany did not enter in the first World Cup, but started their season with a bang by topping the medals table in Lucerne. They picked up five gold medals. This included retaining their European title in the men's eight and then winning the men's single sculls, the women's quadruple sculls, women's double sculls and the lightweight men's double sculls.

The Netherlands showed that they could maintain speed coming off the first World Cup by finishing second on the medals table. They claimed seven medals, two of them gold. Italy claimed the third spot, also with two gold medals.

The host country Switzerland fell to twelfth on the table when they were not able to win any gold medals. But their single sculling star, Jeannine Gmelin rowed her way to silver. Instead reigning World Champion Sanita Puspure of Ireland claimed the European title in the single, with Olympic Champion from 2012, Mirka Topkova Knapkova of the Czech Republic taking bronze.

Switzerland also took silver in the men's double sculls in an intense race to the line. Poland claimed gold and Romania took bronze just ahead of Great Britain.

The Sinkovic brothers of Croatia showed they were back on form by convincingly winning the men's pair. Serbia managed to beat the Croatian duo at the first World Cup, but fell back to sixth in Lucerne. Romania claimed the silver medal and Spain had an impressive sprint finish to take bronze.

The Dutch set a new European Best Time in the women's four, stamping their mark on this boat class. In this first Olympic qualification year for the women's four, teams are trying to ascertain just how much speed they will need to qualify. Romania crossed the line with silver and Poland took bronze in a close finish with Denmark.

Rounding off the blue riband events, the Germans were the ones to beat on the men's side. The German men's eight retained their title and their undefeated record by beating the British and the Dutch to the finish line. The young German star Oliver Zeidler also claimed the European title in the men's single sculls ahead of the Netherlands and Belarus. In the women's eight, Romania was back on top, finishing just a fraction of a second ahead of Great Britain. Russia took the bronze medal.

Filippi Spirit Award

The award for university rowers, the Filippi Spirit Award encapsulates rowing's core values of fairness, teamwork, inclusiveness, timeless and natural. It recognises the achievements of the next generation of rowers.

The award is open to university student rowers worldwide and is given to the rower that best demonstrates the core values of rowing in his/her social, academic and sporting life.

Filippi Boats has been involved with the award since its inception in 2013 and every year the university rowing club of the winner receives a custom-built, top-of-the-range Filippi eight racing shell. The boat recognises the winner's involvement in the club and is designed to help the club develop young rowers.

A call for nominations for the 2019 Filippi Spirit Award will open in September 2019. To qualify, the applicants must have attended university full-time in the 2019 year and row regularly for a university club.

Filippi Lido S.R.L. (also known as Filippi Boats) is a rowing racing boat manufacturer based in Donoratico, Italy. Since 1980 Filippi has produced top Olympic-class rowing boats.
