Clear and immediate

As soon the crews are crossing the finish line, the photo finish starts to develop and the operator starts to work

The whole sequence...

Before continuing...

- What is a photo finish?
- How does this work?
- How do interpret the image(s)?

Where is the finish line?

08 12:20:22

Poznan_2008 - M4- H2 (23-1-2)

Ziel - Main

Start: 20.06.2008 12:12:01.60

- Contrary to a normal camera, the lens is not circular;
- Indeed, the camera has a very thin linear lens;
- The camera continuously takes a number pictures per time unit from the same location;
- The time unit is minimum 1/100 sec;
- That location is the (thin) finish line;
- Those thin pictures are added one after another;
- The result is a 'picture' of the finish line at different moments.

Note: The timing is linked to and activated by the start system

View on the finish line at ... moments ...

- Each part of the photo finish represents what occurred on the finishing line at one precise time (or part of a second).
- It is possible to go to 1000 parts in a second (= 1/1000 sec) or more.
- However, the minimum precision required is 1/100 sec.

Up to 1/10.000 sec

Let's come back to the operator's work...

As seen and controlled by Responsible at the Finish

a. Cursor exactly at bow ball

a. Cursor exactly at bow ball

Done for all crews

b. Matching crew name to each time (or cursor line)

What happens if you do not have a Photo Finish electronic timing system?

If there is no Photo Finish system then more officials maybe needed in the finish tower.

The ORDER OF FINISH is the most important thing!

There should be some camera on the finish line that can capture the finish line, even if it is a high definition video camera.

But there may also be one of more officials assigned to watch and record the finish order

Timing of the Race

Option 1 – Open radio start

- A radio is held by the starter and the start commands are broadcast over the radio
- Finish line official(s) start a watch when the start commands are given and record the times as the crews finish the race.

Timing of the Race

Option 2 – Race Umpire keeps the time of the winning crew

- The Race Umpire starts a watch when the Starter gives the start commands
- The Race Umpire stops the watch when the first crew crosses the finish line – requires a visual signal when the crew crosses (usually a flag person on the finish line)

Timing of the Race

Option 2 – Race Umpire keeps the time of the winning crew

- The Finish Officials record the “split times” between each of the crews which are added to the winning time to get each crew’s respective time.

Thank You!
